ID: 11243
Congress: 6th International Congress on Child and Adolescent Psychiatry
Title: A comparison of intolerance of uncertainty and mental health in juvenile offenders mothers with normal individuals mothers
Authors: Sooreh jamal1
Moradi maryam2
Moradi rahman3
Binandeh hasan4
1 Corresponding Author: MA. of Psychology, School of Psychology, Mohaghegh Ardabili University, Ardabil, Iran. Jamal.sooreh@gmail.com
2 Student of Psychology, School of Psychology, Saqqez University, Kordestan, Iran.
3 MA. of Psychology, School of Psychology, Tabriz University, Tabriz, Iran.
4 MA. of Psychology, School of Psychology, Arak University, Arak, Iran.

Abstract: Background: The aim of this study was to comparison of the mental health of mothers and intolerance of ambiguity in criminal deliquency Mothers and normal deliquency mothers.
Methods: The present study has been done in a form of casual-comparative on 60 patients in the Bookan city. In the present study, Intolerance of Ambiguity Scale and General Health Questionnaire-28 were employed to gather the required data. For data analysis, a multivariate analysis methods by SPSS-21 software was used.
Result: The results showed that the mean scores of offenders deliquent mothers subscales somatization, anxiety symptoms, depressive symptoms and social functioning scores than mothers of normal subjects and this is the difference in social functioning. The level of uncertainty in offenders deliquent mothers is higher than normal.
Conclusions: The results showed that have lower levels of mental health offenders deliquent mothers. These findings focusing on mental health and psychological interventions for offenders deliquent mothers who are can is a great achievement.
Key words: mental health, intolerance of ambiguity, deliquency
Presentation: Poster