| ID: 7419 |
| Congress: 6th International Congress on Child and Adolescent Psychiatry |
| Title: The relationship between parenting styles and trends in adolescent drug |
| Authors: *Mami shahram, Assistant Professor of Psychology Research Unit, University of Ilam. shahram.mami@yahoo.com
Shahbazi Giti, MA General Psychology Research Unit, University of Ilam.
Kikhavani Sattar Assistant Professor In Clinical Psychology
Department of Medicine & Psychosocial Injuries Research Center, University of Medical science
Ilam Iran
Maryam Shahbazi, Clinical Psychology, University of Allameh Tabatabai. akbari khatere, MA General Psychology Research Unit, University of Ilam.
darvish saeedeh-MA General Psychology Research Unit, University of Ilam. |
| Abstract: Introduction: Drug dependence and abuse as a social problem, and mental health. Therefore, the first task should be to institutionalize the principles of healthy living in children's education and is responsible for starting a family.
Objective: To examine the relationship between parenting practices on adolescent addiction would be biased. What style of parenting that adolescent attitudes toward parenting practices and adolescent drug addiction, the trend is back.
Methods: The population of this research is Ayvanghrb city high school students. Using cluster sampling, 100 students were selected as sample. Data collected in the survey questionnaire was Schafer family orientation questionnaire and Dhkordian addiction.
Data analysis: Data analysis using descriptive statistics of mean, standard deviation and Pearson correlation and inferential statistics were performed using the t test for independent groups.
Results: Data analysis showed that between parenting styles and trends with significance level alpha Addiction / 05. There is a significant relationship. The results showed that parenting styles are authoritarian, permissive and loose correlation with the tendency to addiction in adolescents. Results of the survey results are consistent with a 1997 Paykvt 2000, 1388 Gharehdaghi.
Parenting practice - the tendency to addiction - High School
Presentation: Poster |